Robert P. Wiemann, Director
Administrative Appeals Office

DISCUSSION: The application for temporary resident status as a special agricultural worker was denied by the Director, Western Service Center, and is now before the Administrative Appeals Office on appeal. The appeal will be dismissed.

The director denied the application because the applicant failed to establish the performance of at least 90 man-days of qualifying agricultural employment during the eligibility period. This decision was based on adverse information relating to the applicant's claim of employment for [REDACTED] at Santa Maria Berry Farms.

On appeal, the applicant states that he does meet the requirement of having engaged in agricultural work for at least 90 days during the requisite period. He provides copies of the affidavits from Juan Ramirez that he had initially submitted.

In order to be eligible for temporary resident status as a special agricultural worker, an alien must have engaged in qualifying agricultural employment for at least 90 man-days during the twelve-month period ending May 1, 1986, and must be otherwise admissible under section 210(c) of the Act and not ineligible under 8 C.F.R. § 210.3(d). 8 C.F.R. § 210.3(a). An applicant has the burden of proving the above by a preponderance of the evidence. 8 C.F.R. § 210.3(b).

On the Form I-700 application, the applicant claimed to have worked with strawberries for 115 days for [REDACTED] in Santa Barbara County, California from May 1985 to May 1986.

In support of his claim, the applicant submitted a Form I-705 affidavit and a separate employment statement, both purportedly signed by [REDACTED]. The documents indicated the applicant had picked and weeded strawberries.

In the course of attempting to verify the applicant's claimed employment, the director acquired information which contradicted the applicant's claim. On January 29, 1990, an Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) officer interviewed the office manager for [REDACTED]. That official indicated that Mr. [REDACTED] employed "not more than two (2) to three (3) individuals at any given time . . . (and these) individuals were continuously being replaced by newly hired employees." [REDACTED] had sub-leased 2.29 acres of farmland in 1985, and 2.1 acres in 1986. The farm's office manager, speaking from 22 years of experience in farming, stated that "there is only a need for two (2) persons per acre of land in strawberry farming." The INS officer indicated over 2,700 aliens applied for special agricultural worker status based on the claim of having worked for [REDACTED].

Furthermore, in a sworn affidavit dated July 27, 1989, [REDACTED] stated that he had been advised that his signature had been forged on employment documents, and that he had never authorized anyone to sign such documents in his name. [REDACTED] further stated that "(a)ny document which purports to bear my signature in reference (to) any INS application should therefore be regarded as null and void."

On March 27, 1991, the director advised the applicant in writing of the adverse information, and of the director's intent to deny the application. However, no response was received. The director determined that the applicant had failed to overcome the adverse evidence, and denied the application.

On appeal, the applicant states that he is a person of good moral character who, by submitting properly notarized affidavits, complied with the requirements of section 210 of the Act.

Generally, the inference to be drawn from the documentation provided shall depend on the extent of the documentation, its credibility, and amenability to verification. 8 C.F.R. § 210.3(b)(1). Evidence submitted by an applicant will have its sufficiency judged according to its probative value and credibility. 8 C.F.R. § 210.3(b)(2). Personal testimony by an applicant which is not corroborated, in whole or in part, by other credible evidence (including testimony by persons other than the applicant) will not serve to meet an applicant's burden of proof. 8 C.F.R. § 210.3(b)(3).

There is no mandatory type of documentation required with respect to the applicant's burden of proof; however, the documentation must be credible. All documents submitted must have an appearance of reliability, i.e., if the documents appear to have been forged, or otherwise deceitfully created or obtained, the documents are not credible. United Farm Workers (AFL-CIO) v. INS, Civil No. S-87-1064-JFM (E.D. Cal.).

The applicant has not provided any statement from [REDACTED] or anyone else, which would suggest that the adverse evidence in this matter is not valid. In fact, the applicant has not submitted any new documentation since the application was filed in 1988.

[REDACTED] the applicant's purported employer, has denounced employment affidavits in his name as forgeries and declared all such documents to be "null and void." An official of [REDACTED] has indicated that [REDACTED] only hired small numbers of workers who were frequently replaced. The applicant has not overcome this adverse information which directly contradicts his claim. Therefore, the documentary evidence submitted by the applicant cannot be considered as having any probative value or evidentiary weight.

The applicant has failed to establish the performance of at least 90 man-days of qualifying agricultural employment during the twelve-month statutory period ending May 1, 1986. Consequently, the applicant is ineligible for adjustment to temporary resident status as a special agricultural worker.

ORDER: The appeal is dismissed. This decision constitutes a final notice of ineligibility.
